

Notes on contributors

EDITORS:

Bogusława Dobek-Ostrowska is a Professor at the University of Wrocław and Chair of the Department of Communication and Journalism. She is a founder and past president (2007–2013) of the Polish Communication Association. She has published several books and articles. She is interested in political communication and media systems. She is a founder and editor of the Central European Journal of Communication. She is an editor of the series Studies in Communication and Politics (Peter Lang Edition) and Politics and Communication (University of Wrocław Press).

E-mail: boguslawa.dobek-ostrowska@uwr.edu.pl

Julia Trzcińska is a Ph.D. student at the Institute of Political Science at the University of Wrocław, Poland. She is also a student at the Confucius Institute at the University of Wrocław. Her research interests focus on political communication and media, but also East Asian cultures (South Korea and China), pop culture and fan studies.

E-mail: julia.trzcinska@uwr.edu.pl

CONTRIBUTORS:

Péter Bajomi-Lázár is a Professor of Mass Communication and Head of the Institute of Social Sciences at the Budapest Business School. His latest monograph is Party Colonisation of the Media in Central and Eastern Europe (The Central European University Press, 2014).

E-mail: bajomilp@gmail.com

Nikleia Eteokleous, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Educational Sciences, Frederick University of Cyprus. She holds a Ph.D. in Educational Administration with an emphasis on Educational Technology (confirmed 2004), an M.Ed in Instructional Systems with an emphasis on Educational Technology (2003), an M.Ed in Educational Administration (2002) from Pennsylvania State University and a BA in Public Administration and Management with an emphasis on Finance (2001) from the University of Cyprus.

E-mail: nikleiaeteokleous@gmail.com

Alicja Jaskiernia, Ph.D., is a Professor at the University of Warsaw, Poland. Her research interests focus on media policy, media systems, international communication, media and democracy, the European Union and the Council of Europe media standards. Her publications include books and over a few dozen articles and book chapters about media policy, media in the U.S. and impact of the media on democratic systems. She was involved as one of the Polish experts in Media Pluralism Monitor (MPM2015 and MPM 2016) conducted by the Centre for Media Pluralism and Media Freedom at the European University Institute in Florence.

E-mail: a.jaskiernia@uw.edu.pl

Theodora Maniou, Ph.D., is a Lecturer in the Department of Journalism, Frederick University of Cyprus. She holds a BA in Journalism (AUTH, Greece), an MA in Communications Policy Studies (CITY, University of London, UK) & a Ph.D. in Journalism (AUTH, Greece). She has worked as a journalist since 1994 in broadcast, print and web media. She is a member of the International Federation of Journalists, the European Federation of Journalists and the Macedonia Thrace Union of Journalists (Greece).

E-mail: manioud@yahoo.gr

Michał Meina is a Research Assistant at the Faculty of Physics, Astronomy and Informatics, NCU Toruń. His research interests intersect a variety of fields in Computer Science: data mining and machine learning, body sensor networks, databases and stream processing. He is actively involved in many interdisciplinary projects.

E-mail: mich@fizyka.umk.pl

Henrik Müller studied economics at Kiel University and holds a doctorate degree in economics from the University of the Armed Forces Hamburg. He is a professor at TU Dortmund University, where he holds the chair of economic policy journalism, and the speaker of the interdisciplinary Dortmund Center for data-based Media Analysis (DoCMA). He's the author of numerous books and a frequent commentator on current affairs in the media.

E-mail: henrik.mueller@tu-dortmund.de

Krzysztof Olechnicki is an Associate Professor and Head of The Section of Cultural Studies in the Institute of Sociology at the NCU in Toruń, and also President of The Jan Mylius Scientific Society of Elbląg. His major research areas include sociology of internet, sociology of religion, visual sociology and new social movements.

E-mail: ko@umk.pl

Irene Photiou is a member of the special teaching staff in the Department of Journalism, Frederick University of Cyprus. She holds a Master's in Communication from the State University of New York (Brookport, USA) and a Bachelor's in Journalism and Mass Media from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (Greece). She is currently studying towards her Ph.D. with a focus on mass media and culture with the Department of Journalism and Mass Media of Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (Greece).

E-mail: photiou.irene@gmail.com

Anda Rožukalne, Ph.D., former journalist and editor, establisher and chair of the Board of Association of Latvian Journalists (2010–2012, 2014–2015), Head of the Department of Communication Studies at Riga Stradiņš University in Latvia since 2010. She is a well-known media expert, author of books and academic publications on journalism quality, media systems and media regulation in Latvia and Baltic States. In the beginning of 2016 Anda Rožukalne became a Chair of the Board of the Baltic Centre for Media Excellence, which is the clearing house for journalists training and a facilitator of professional dialogues in the Baltic and beyond. She has actively taken part in the drafting of laws related to Latvia's media environment, and in 2012 she was a member of a working group to come up with a detailed concept for a new public media outlet.

E-mail: anda.rozukalne@rsu.lv

Klāvs Sedlenieks, Docent at the Faculty of Communication, Riga Stradins University. Klavs Sedlenieks is a social anthropologist, holds a Ph.D. from Tallinn University (Estonia) and MPhil from University of Cambridge (UK). His regional interests are linked to the Baltic and Western Balkan area and he has written on various topics related to political and economic anthropology, particularly informal economic and political activities. Another area of his specialisation is anthropology of peace and peaceful societies. As his academic post is at the Faculty of Communication, he has recently collaborated on several projects in the field of communication and media analysis.

E-mail: klavs.sedlenieks@rsu.lv

Ioannis Seitanidis is currently studying towards the completion of his MSc in Banking & Finance, in the Open University of Cyprus. He also holds a BA in Business Administration (A-TEI Serron, Greece), where he has been working as a journalist since 1994, and today he is the Chief Editor of Finance & Economics in the Cypriot newspaper Politis.

E-mail: seitanid@gmail.com

Agnieszka Stępińska, Ph.D. hab., is a professor at the Faculty of Political Science and Journalism at the Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań, Poland. Her main areas of research are political communication, journalism and media content. She is currently a vice-chair of the Working Group of the COST ACTION IS1308 “Populist Political Communication in Europe. Comprehending the Challenge of Mediated Political Populism for Democratic Politics” and a leader of a national research team in the international project “Journalistic Role Performance Around the Globe”.

Email: agnieszka.stepinska@amu.edu.pl

Jesper Strömbäck, Ph.D., is Professor in Journalism and Political Communication at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden, and associate editor of Political Communication. His research interests include the mediatization of politics, political news journalism, public opinion, media and campaign effects, political public relations, and comparative research. His recent books include Populist Political Communication in Europe (2016, edited together with Toril Aalberg, Frank Esser, Carsten Reinemann & Claes de Vreese), Utan invandring stannar Sverige (2016) and Making Sense of Mediatized Politics (2016, co-edited with Frank Esser).

E-mail: jesper.stromback@jmg.gu.se

Wojciech Walczak is a Ph.D. candidate at the Institute of Sociology, Nicolaus Copernicus University, Toruń, Poland. A sociologist and data analyst, his sociological research interests revolve around digital media's impact on society, as well as social and socio-digital inequalities. Professionally, he is a software engineer focused on text processing and machine learning.

E-mail: ww@tosh.pl