

About the authors

Karima Aziz holds an MA in Political Science and an MA in Polish Studies from the University of Vienna and is currently a Marie Skłodowska Curie Early Stage Researcher in the “Changing Employment” Initial Training Network. Her PhD thesis at the London Metropolitan University examines the experiences of female Polish migrant workers in the UK. Her academic interests lie in the field of migration, gender and work.

Ewa Banaszak, PhD in Social Sciences, lecturer at the Institute of Sociology, University of Wrocław, Poland. Her academic interests lie in the areas of sociology of the body (experience of nudity), everyday fashion, social and interpersonal communication. She is engaged in international research (Wrocław Fashion Project) focused on the dynamics of daily dress code. Member of the Board of the Polish Sociological Association — Wrocław Department of the Polish Sociological Association.

Rachid Belkacem, PhD in Economics, lecturer (teaching and research) in economics and management, University of Lorraine, France. His academic interests lie in the areas of labour economy, job insecurity and various forms of geographical mobility in relation to labour. Member of the Laboratoire Lorrain des Sciences Sociales (1997–2015).

Hal K. Colebatch is a political scientist with a focus on the architecture of public authority. He draws on analytical approaches from political science, public administration and organisational analysis to explore the practices through which public authority is mobilised in the managing of public concerns, and the ways in which these can be seen as “work”. He set up the graduate program in Social Science and Policy at the University of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia, where he is now a Professorial Visiting Fellow in the School of Social Science.

Sylvie Contrepois, PhD in Sociology, Reader in European employment relations at the School of Social Sciences, London Metropolitan University (London) and member of the Centre de Recherches Sociologiques et Politiques de Paris — Cultures et Sociétés urbaines (CRESPPA-CSU). Her work focuses on trade union action and mobilises Sociology of Work as well as Social History and Labour Law. She authored Syndicats, la nouvelle donne (Syllepse, 2003); co-authored Globalizing Employment Relations: Multinational Firms and Central and Eastern European Transitions (Palgrave, 2010) and Changing Work and Community Identities in European Regions: Perspectives on the Past and Present (Palgrave, 2011).

Judit Csoba, PhD in Sociology, Associate Professor and Head of Department of Sociology and Social Policy, University of Debrecen, Hungary. Her research fields cover sociology of work, social policy, comparative analysis of employment policy in the European Countries, active labour market policy and social economy. Latest book: Decent Work: Full Employment: Utopia or Chance of the 21st Century (Bremen, 2015).

Łukasz Cywiński, Social Welfare Centre in Czeladź, is a social worker of many years standing. He has also been working in the local court of law in Będzin as a probation officer for adults where he guards people with criminal judgements. He is an academic lecturing in Labour Safety Management at the University of Katowice where he teaches in the internal security field of study.

Jan Czarzasty, PhD in Economics, lecturer at the Warsaw School of Economics (SGH), Warsaw, Poland. His academic interests include economic sociology, industrial relations and organisational culture. Assistant Editor of the Warsaw Forum of Economic Sociology (WFES).

Iza Desperak, PhD, sociologist, University of Łódź. Her academic interests focus on sociology of work, especially discrimination on the grounds of gender, and precariat. She researches work relations, including social audit in garment industry, and cooperates with fair trade organisations.

Daria Hofman, MA in Social Sciences, PhD student at the Faculty of Social Sciences of the University of Wrocław. Her academic interests lie in the areas of military sociology, sociology of dispositional groups, national security.

Elżbieta Kolasińska, PhD in Social Sciences, lecturer at the Institute of Philosophy, Sociology and Journalism, University of Gdańsk, Poland. Her academic interests include sociology of work and economy, competence, social capital and human resources management. She is a management board member and a secretary of the Sociology of Work Section of the Polish Sociological Association (2013–2016).

Agata Krasowska, PhD in Sociology, lecturer at the Institute of Sociology, University of Wrocław, Poland. Her academic interests lie in the areas of theories of social change, agency, anthropology of culture, processes of precarisation of work and qualitative methodology.

Jan Maciejewski, Prof., sociologist, lecturer and educator. Since 2009 he has been head of the Department of Sociology of Dispositional Groups in the Institute of Sociology at the University of Wrocław. He is a researcher and a consultant in sociology of dispositional groups, military sociology, economic sociology, sociology of organisation and management, sociology of education and andragogy and security. He is a member of many scientific societies and associations. Active in scientific committees of conferences and conventions — including the Polish Sociological Association. The author of more than a hundred and fifty scientific papers, including several monographs, dozens of books and articles in edited volumes, published both home and abroad. The most important monograph: Dispositional Groups. A Sociological Analysis (2012, second, extended edition of the book published in 2014).

Gwen E. McEvoy, PhD in Sociology, Assistant Professor in the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at Nazarbayev University in Astana, Kazakhstan. Her interests lie in sociology of work, gender, social welfare, post-socialism and qualitative methods, with an area focus on East Central Europe.

Adam Mrozowicki, PhD in Social Sciences, lecturer at the Institute of Sociology, University of Wrocław, Poland. His academic interests lie in the areas of sociology of work, comparative employment relations, critical social realism and qualitative methodology. Chair of the Sociology of Work Section of the Polish Sociological Association (2013–2016) and Vice-President of Research Committee 44 “Labour Movements” of the International Sociological Association (2014–2018).

Karol Muszyński, socio-legal researcher, PhD candidate at the Faculty of Law and Administration, University of Warsaw. He writes a doctoral thesis on the post-crisis developments in Polish labour law.

Olga Nowaczyk, PhD in Social Sciences, lecturer at the Institute of Sociology, University of Wrocław, Poland. Her academic interests lie in the areas of macrosociology, sociology of military and qualitative methodology. Member of the Executive Committee of Polish Sociological Association (2014–2017) and chair of the Polish Sociological Association — Wrocław Department (2015–2018).

Esma Gültüvin Gür Omay, PhD in Communication Studies and MA in Translation Studies. She is a lecturer in the Faculty of Political Sciences at Istanbul University. Her research interests are communication studies, social rights, consumerism, and cultural studies.

Umüt Omay, PhD in Social Policy, an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Economics at Istanbul University. His research interests are labour studies, gender studies, industrial relations, labour sociology, labour psychology, labour philosophy, organisational behaviour, social rights, consumer society, cultural studies, and capitalism.

Agnieszka Piasna, PhD in Sociology (University of Cambridge), researcher at the European Trade Union Institute in Brussels, Belgium. Her academic interests lie in the areas of job quality, employers’ working-time practices, work intensification, women’s employment, labour market regulation, and international comparative research. Member of the European Statistical Advisory Committee (ESAC) and associated researcher at the Centre for New Development Thinking.

Isabelle Pigeron-Piroth is a Research Associate at the Institute of Geography and Spatial Planning, University of Luxembourg, Luxembourg. Her research deals with cross-border labour markets and their impacts on and challenges for cross-border development inside the Greater Region Saar-Lor-Lux. She holds an MA in Economics from the University of Nancy (France) focusing on labour economics.

Marcos Roberto Mariano Pina is a PhD candidate in the Department of Sociology at Federal University of São Carlos, Brazil. His research interest focuses on sociology of work, with the emphasis on creative industry, artistic and musical occupations.

Radosław Polkowski, Marie Curie “Changing Employment” ESR and PhD candidate at the University of Strathclyde. His project explores migrant inclusion and exclusion in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Poland using qualitative research techniques. His academic interests blend sociology of work, values and emotions. Apart from his current project’s focus on migrations in Europe, he is also particularly interested in issues concerning South Korean society. He uses audio-visual techniques (podcasts, films, photography) as a tool of research dissemination.

Joanna Róg-Ilnicka, PhD in Social Sciences, lecturer at the Institute of Sociology, University of Zielona Góra, Poland. Her academic interests lie in the areas of sociology of work, sociology of youth and education, social psychology. She collaborates with the “Ja — My — Oni” Foundation, which is engaged in promoting knowledge about mental health in the Lubuskie District. Vice-President of the Sociology of Work Section of the Polish Sociological Association (2013–2016) and Chair of the Polish Sociological Association — Zielona Góra Department (2015–2018).

Nina Sahraoui, Marie Curie Early Stage Researcher and PhD candidate at London Metropolitan University. Her doctoral research focuses on migrant workers’ experiences in elder care in London, Paris and Madrid and her research interests revolve around a gendered political economy analysis of the articulation of employment, care and migration regimes.

Paul Stewart, PhD in Sociology from the University of Leeds is Professor of Sociology of Work and Employment at Strathclyde University. He has researched and published widely in the fields of Sociology of Labour and worked with shop floor workers in the automotive industry on programmes of participatory action research in Brazil, Canada and the UK. He is currently researching migration and employment and is a member of the Critical Labour Studies network.

Piotr Wróblewski, PhD and habilitation thesis in Social Sciences, Associate Professor at the Institute of Sociology, University of Silesia. His research concerns sociology of culture, theory of nations and social anthropology. He is a member of the Polish Sociological Association.

Krešimir Žažar, PhD in Sociology, postdoctoral research/teaching assistant at the Department of Sociology in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences of University of Zagreb, Republic of Croatia. His academic interests include epistemology and methodology of sociology, classical and recent sociological theories, as well as sociology of contemporary societies in the broadest sense. From 2011 to 2013 he was the Secretary of the Croatian Sociological Association. Since 2015 he has been Chair of the Theoretical Sociology Section (of the denoted association) whose foundation he also initiated.

Violetta Zentai is a cultural anthropologist and the director of the Center for Policy Studies at the Central European University (CEU). Her major fields of interest are social inequalities and equality policies, European policy making, gender and ethnic justice, and post-socialist models of capitalism. She coordinated comparative European research projects (DIOSCURI, EDUMIGROM) and contributed to several others (QUING, NEUJOBS). She is also a faculty member of the CEU’s Department of Sociology and Social Anthropology and the Department of Public Policy. She held various senior expert positions with the Open Society Foundations in 1994–2014. She holds PhD in Cultural Anthropology from the Rutgers University, USA.